None of the features of war that make battles glorious were wanting in this sanguinary conflict upon the shallow strait which on that spring morning separated the camp of the Northern troops from the white tents and grim batteries of the soldiers of the South. The tale of that day abounds in deeds of valor and heroic achievement from the hour the Cumberland sank with guns roaring and colors flying until the brave commander of the Monitor, with his eyes blinded from the effects of the enemy s shot, gave orders from the couch where he lay to his gallant comrades about him. But the great and lasting issue of the battle between the Merrimac and the Monitor is the fact that it revolutionised the Navies of the world. This was the first light of lion-clad vessels, and its effect was to pronounce the doom of line-of-battle ships, and to demonstrate that rams and iron-clads were in future to decide all naval warfare. Another remarkable...
